Synagogue and Church Visits

Hosted by the Center for Catholic-Jewish Studies

One way to build understanding among members of different religious traditions is to study and discuss our respective approaches to prayer and worship.

In an effort to build deeper appreciation of the religious life of our neighbors, Saint Leo University's Center for Catholic-Jewish Studies (CCJS) invites you to attend one or both events at Congregation Kol Ami and St. Paul Catholic Church. Participants will learn about the distinctive liturgical traditions of each community from their clergy.

A question-and-answer session will be moderated by Dr. Matthew Tapie, associate professor of theology and CCJS director; and/or Rabbi David Maayan, the Maureen and Douglass Cohn Visiting Chair in Jewish Thought and CCJS assistant director.

CCJS thanks Rabbi Rachel Blatt from Congregation Kol Ami and Father Craig Morley from St. Paul Catholic Church for serving as hosts.
